ABOUT US 26

WELCOME TO THE FORUM

Since its founding in 1967, ASEAN has proved to be a powerful force for maintaining peace across Southeast Asia, accelerating economic growth, and improving the lives of the citizens of its 10 member states. Today, ASEAN is prosperous and peaceful, with a strong record of accomplishment in areas as diverse as countering transnational crime, promoting sustainable development, and managing natural disasters.

At the heart of the Indo-Pacific region, ASEAN is diplomatically, economically, and strategically central to U.S. interests in the 21st century. The United States is proud to maintain 42 years of close ties with ASEAN. The substantial trade and investment between the United States and ASEAN creates jobs for all our peoples. Our partnership continues to grow as we address shared challenges such as terrorism, trafficking in persons, and maritime security.

Under President Trump's leadership, the United States has significantly increased engagement with ASEAN, its member states, and the region. Support for ASEAN centrality remains a cornerstone of our vision for a peaceful and prosperous Indo-Pacific region. We share a keen and enduring interest in building and sustaining a rules-based order in the Indo-Pacific. The United States and ASEAN continue to work together to promote the values and policies that help the region grow and thrive in the areas of security, freedom of the seas, market economics, good governance, and respect for rules-based order.

We have partnered with Pacific Forum to organize this conference, bringing together foreign policy specialists, subject-matter experts, and distinguished opinion leaders to probe the past, present, and future of these key issues related to U.S.-ASEAN relations. Thank you for joining us this week and sharing your expertise and insights. I look forward to hearing about new frontiers of U.S.-ASEAN partnership.

JANE BOCKLAGE
CHARGÉ D'AFFAIRES, US MISSION TO ASEAN

It is our pleasure to welcome you to the United States–ASEAN Partnership Forum organized by Pacific Forum with support from the US Mission to ASEAN, and in cooperation with the Habibie Center, one of Southeast Asia’s most esteemed research institutions. This gathering of top Southeast Asian and US foreign policy specialists, subject-matter experts, and next-generation scholars comes at an opportune time for US–ASEAN relations.

First, ASEAN is at the heart of regional integration efforts. With the launch of the ASEAN Economic Community (AEC) in 2015, the adoption of the ASEAN Master Plan on Connectivity 2025, and the ASEAN Community Vision 2025, the ASEAN member-states have demonstrated their commitment to being at the center of regional economic and security cooperation. As the US implements its whole-of-nation strategy in the Indo-Pacific, ASEAN centrality will continue to serve as the basic framework for strengthening partnerships in the region.

Second, ASEAN has become and remains the lead convener in the Indo-Pacific region. ASEAN hosts the East Asia Summit, the ASEAN Regional Forum (ARF), and the ASEAN Defense Ministers Meeting Plus (ADMM+). While these mechanisms have facilitated better understanding and provided opportunities for practical cooperation in the region, there is a growing sense of frustration with the persistence of tension between major powers, the pace of progress on building trust among ASEAN member states, and in ASEAN’s ability to reach consensus on its strategic vision. Many in the region value US leadership and seek a clear strategy for enhancing US–ASEAN cooperation moving forward.

All of these factors point to important questions – What are innovative ways to strengthen US–ASEAN Strategic Partnership and deepen cooperation? How should the United States engage with the 10-nation bloc, amidst domestic political dynamics both in the West and in Southeast Asia, and to keep up with new twenty-first century realities? What policies should be pursued in Washington and in the capitals of Southeast Asia to address common challenges, successfully tap opportunities, and move US –ASEAN engagement forward?

Together, we will explore these questions and more, in a not-for-attribution setting designed to stimulate honest debate. Our hope is that this forum will result in innovative and actionable policy recommendations that can facilitate movement toward a more peaceful, stable, and prosperous Indo-Pacific region.

PACIFIC FORUM

Based in Honolulu, the Pacific Forum (www.pacforum.org) is a foreign policy research institute focused on the Indo-Pacific Region. Founded in 1975, the Pacific Forum collaborates with a broad network of research institutes from around the Pacific Rim, drawing on Asian perspectives and disseminating project findings and recommendations to global leaders, governments, and members of the public throughout the region. The Forum's programs encompass current and emerging political, security, economic, and maritime policy issues, and work to help stimulate cooperative policies through rigorous research, analyses and dialogues.

THE HABIBIE CENTER

Founded by Bacharuddin Jusuf Habibie and family in 1999, The Habibie Center is an independent, non-governmental and non-profit organization that aims to establish a structurally and culturally democratic society that acknowledges, honors and promotes human rights. It also aims to promote and advance effective human resources management and the socialization of technology.

UNITED STATES MISSION TO ASEAN

The United States Mission to ASEAN partners with ASEAN and related stakeholders to advance U.S. interests in a peaceful, prosperous, and integrated Southeast Asia that respects the rule of law, upholds the dignity of its people and actively addresses regional and global concerns. The partnership of the United States and ASEAN focuses on five areas including supporting economic integration, expanding maritime cooperation, cultivating ASEAN emerging leaders, promoting opportunity for ASEAN women, and addressing transnational challenges.
